

Language & The Borg

Part III

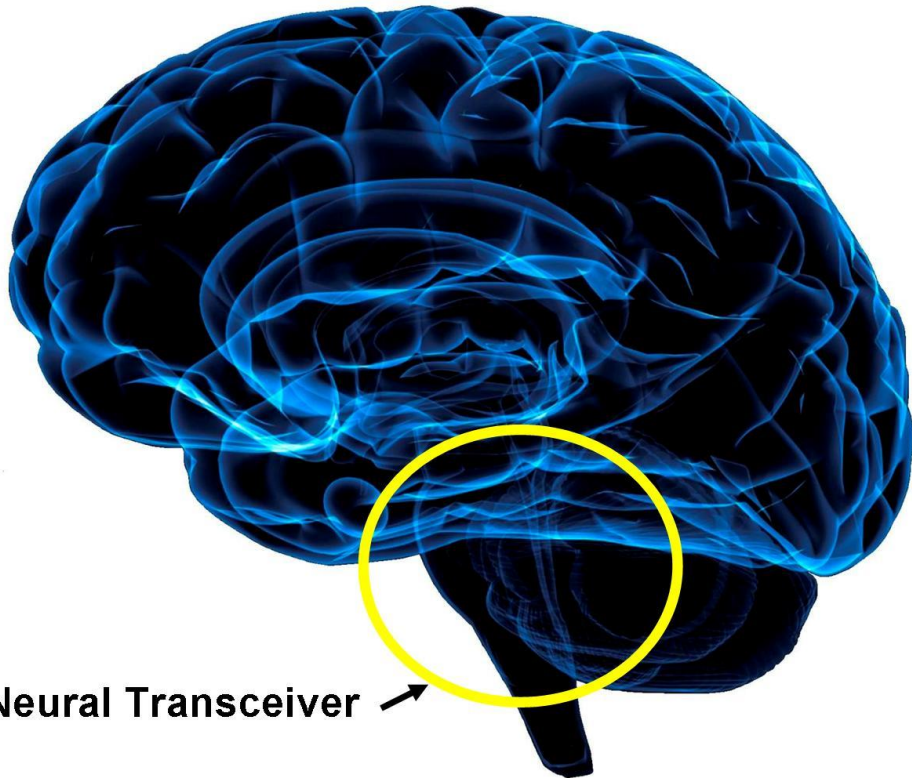

By Ciarán Handley

23rd November 2018

Language & the Borg

Chapter 2

Minuet

Borg Neural Transceiver →

A Small Grey can learn to speak a new language, like French, in just under two minutes

That is the time it takes to download the language into the memory of their implants. The speed at which a Borg can learn to speak a new language depends on the degree of assimilation, and on the level of permissions and access to the Borg computer networks. But they do not learn like us. They are never student.

So how do they do it? I'll give you a clue. They don't learn a single word of it. Not a single word. They simply access a Borg language database remotely via their neural implants. Access to the computers uses a subspace communicator in the implants.

Star Trek - Minuet

Language & The Borg

End of Part III